Scott:

As discussed, here's the particulars on the Bee County Ranch:

795+ ac, lots of oak trees, one of the higher hills in Bee County. Good mix of pasture and sage brush. There's a water well and tank.

A real "honey hole". Lots of quail and prime dove hunting. Deer, hogs and supposedly some turkey.

Owner's name is Colton Brinkoeter. Asking $675/acre, no minerals. Negotiable. I think for that price you ought to get 1/4 - 1/2 of the minerals.

Ranch is three miles west of Mineral (NNW of Beeville about 15 miles). His number is 361-358-2582. I found out about it from a mutual friend of ours, Bryan Key, also from Beeville.

P.S. I've also attached my resume. It looks like our pipe deal fell through, and I am looking hard for a job back in international marketing. Let me know if you hear of anything.

This is very kind of you and I really appreciate it very much. I shall phone you to thank you on behalf of my family and myself as a stop gap measure till I am back from India by 1st week of December to thank you in person.

The lawyer has asked me to compile all the letters, thus kindly send it by internal mail to Amr Ibrahim, EB4737B. Finally, strange as it might sound, the lawyer has spelled my first name in the letter wrongly as "Amir", and I wonder if there is still time to correct it to "Amr" without the "i". If this is a bit late, then it is fine as it stands.

Once more, thank you very, and I really appreciate it.

Scott:

I hope that all is well. India is still going strong with additional involvement in commodity trading (electricity, fuels...etc.)

Please advice of the best time to phone you this week to seek your help in reference to compiling letters of recommendation for the Green Card application. The application, supported by Enron, will be under the "Alien of Extraordinary Ability" Category. I am sure that your recommendation will go a very long way and I am hopeful that you will agree to help.

I am enclosing the email I received from the lawyer and the sample letter suggested. I am trying to highlight--where the lawyer indicated--the attempts to safeguard and promote US investment in Argentina, the rapport I had with the various echelons of authority in that country, and shed light on character and ability. Please feel free to add/delete as you see fit and advice of any comments and/or suggestions.

Needless to say, and regardless of outcome, I really appreciate your help and advice.

I just wanted to touch base with you to let you know that the new season clothing line is in! The focus this season is on color. Basic colors for suits, sport coats and trousers are highlighted with a splash of color in shirts to give you a new youthful, but distinguished look.

Fabrics are light and airy for the warmer climate ahead.

Don't forget to make room for a "home run suit". Even if you don't wear suits every day, you need at least one that makes a BIG impression.

For more about the new line, please call me or e-mail me to make an appointment.

Just wanted to let everyone know I started a new job last Friday: Pipeline Power Partners 10000 Memorial Drive, Suite 200 Houston, Texas 77024 713-290-8762 I'm back working on compressor stations and gas storage projects with some of the guys I worked with on the Columbia Gas Compressor station in '93-'94. Note new email address also.

Barry called me last week about the well pump. It was not working and he had tried everything he knew to do. We decided to call Western Water Well Service in Conroe to check it out. Bottom line-it was beyond repair and we had to replace at a cost of $765.52. When our tenant at the time took it upon himself to dig a new well ($1500) he had them put in a real cheap pump-so that's why it went out in a relatively short period of time. We now have only $90 in the account so everyone needs to think about making a contribution sometime soon. If you have a question, please call.

I enjoyed visiting with you as well. I was very impressed with the students that I interviewed. You guys are certainly doing a great job educating. I had the pleasure of visiting with Milagros and was very impressed with her and I agree with your comments.

Some of the students were interested in additional reading that I thought might be helpful to them. 2 books that I think are very good are 1) Option Volatility and Pricing by Sheldon Natenberg. This is textbook type reading that is the best book on options that I know. 2) Reminiscences of A Stock Operator by Edwin Lefevre. This is the best book on trading that I have read (I am actually currently reading it for the fifth of sixth time). It is an easy read and is the real life story of a trader in the early 1900's. A must read for anyone who has interest in markets and trading.

Sincerely,

Hi Geynille and Scott,

I wanted to thank you for lunch today and tell you how much I enjoyed meeting you. Input from professionals such as yourself helps us to make our classes more relevant and offer better advice to our students. We appreciate that you are willing to take the time to make this valuable contribution.

One of my former students, Milagros Daetz, dropped by to see me later in the day to tell me about her Enron interviews. Milagros was very excited about Enron and impressed with all of the people she had met. I want to offer an unsolicited recommendation on her behalf. Milagros is one of the most impressive students I have ever taught. While her GPA (3.9) is sufficient to certify her academic record, I wanted to comment on her intangible qualities. Milagros is mentally tough, hard working, determined, and ambitious. Just as important, she is a genuinely nice person. She deals with people very well and possesses what I would describe as quiet leadership characteristics. In other words, she leads by example and by reason. I also find her to be mature beyond her age and willing to assume responsibility for her own choices. In short, I think Milagros would be an asset to any organization.

Again, it was good meeting you. Please feel free to contact me if I can help you in any way.

<http://www.meridien-research.com/doc.asp?docid=799>

For most individuals, a mortgage is likely to be the largest loan they ever incur. For this reason, it is not hard to imagine why, to date, many mortgage seekers have hesitated to use the Internet as a channel for loan origination. Concerns about the validity of data, use of a new technology, and security contribute to this hesitancy. However, with mortgage interest rates near 30-year lows and consumers refinancing existing mortgages at high levels, the current economic conditions have created a positive environment for online mortgage lending to flourish. This report describes four potential business models a financial institution may adopt when implementing its own Internet strategy for mortgage lending.

2. Electronic Invoice Presentment and Payment: The Key to Lockbox (Wholesale e-Financial Services access)
(e-Payments Client access) <http://www.meridien-research.com/doc.asp?docid=800>

Banks have traditionally handled the collection and processing of remittance information and payments for their corporate customers through physical lockbox facilities. Corporations, however, are increasingly moving their payment function online. In the process, they are losing the paper-bound connection of payment to remittance; now they are looking for ways to keep their collection information integrated with their billing information. Electronic invoice presentment and payment (EIPP) is one solution to their problem, and it brings both challenges and opportunities to banks. While EIPP does threaten the lockbox revenues of banks, it offers them the means to expand their involvement in their customers' payment and collection processes by completing the invoice-payment-remittance-settlement cycle. This report explores the roles that exist for banks in the EIPP space and the strategies they can employ as they look for ways to continue serving their corporate customers.

3. Invest in Wireless Payments A Meridien/FSTC report (Meridien clients - all services - only) http://www.meridien-research.com/misc/fstc/invest_in_wireless_payments.asp Financial institutions and mobile telecommunications firms in Europe and Asia are already introducing wireless payment capability. We see opportunities in the United States as well for financial institutions and telcos to work together to develop wireless payment solutions that can both meet corporate goals and address the structural issues existing in the American wireless environment. Telcos are now urgently assessing strategies to attain profitability; wireless payments are a key element to meet that goal. Financial institutions that act quickly can participate as new wireless payment capabilities are developed, thereby ensuring that solutions also meet the needs of their industry and their customers.

Latest Findings from Meridien:

1. Converting Policyholders into Customers: Insurance Agents Hold the Key (Customer Relationship Management/Corporate Customer Management Client Access) <http://www.meridien-research.com/doc.asp?docid=825>

Financial services institutions process sensitive customer data to deliver products and services to customers in a more efficient and effective manner. New technologies have made this data extremely mobile and vulnerable to uses beyond that for which it was initially collected. Regulators may issue stipulations about the data that can be collected and how it can be used, but customers may have their own set of stipulations. It is up to the institution to balance their demands for privacy with its need for adequate data. Technology can help, but one must understand its limitations. This report defines privacy management and describes how privacy management middleware works.

2. Integrated, Multichannel Service Systems (Customer Relationship Management/Customer Interaction Client Access) <http://www.meridien-research.com/doc.asp?docid=824>

Financial service institutions today face a large, oftentimes bewildering, and rapidly evolving array of service constituencies and channels, each with its own service needs and expectations. Many vendors and some progressive institutions are moving to integrate these multichannel service systems to provide a single source of service information for use across different service channels. This early outlook report examines this still developing trend. It reviews the driving factors, identifies the principal service trends, presents a conceptual model for integrated service, explores success factors, and considers adoption patterns.

3. Risk Integration Services: Should We Order Out? (Risk Management Client Access) <http://www.meridien-research.com/doc.asp?docid=827>

Risk projects are complicated and high risk. Most financial services institutions do not have the staff to fulfill all of the required resources through all of a project's phases and will have to hire assistance from outside. There are new ways, however, to combine the resources of business and IT consultants, vendor-provided services, and in-house capacities to significantly reduce total project costs. Once an institution has a framework for evaluating the abilities and appropriateness of professional service providers and their risk services on offer, it can selectively purchase the expertise and experience it lacks. This report provides such a framework for decision-making, breaking the evaluation process down into phases that mirror the process of acquiring and implementing a financial risk management system.

Latest Findings from Meridien:

1. From Policy to Practice: Privacy Management Solutions (Customer Relationship Management/Customer Interaction Client Access) <http://www.meridien-research.com/doc.asp?docid=819> This is the third Meridien report in a series that deals with privacy issues worldwide. Advanced technology has made customer data more mobile than ever. Financial institutions analyze, transmit, and store sensitive customer data every day to deliver products and services to their customers in an efficient and effective manner. But technological advancements have also created an environment in which financial institutions can sell customer data to third parties or inadequately protect customer information. Regulators may stipulate which data can be collected and how it can be used, but customers may have their own set of stipulations. It is up to the institution to balance these demands. This report defines privacy management and examines three vendors offering privacy management middleware solutions.

2. XML: Are We Speaking the Same Language? (Wholesale e-Financial Client Access) (Emerging Trading Technologies Client Access) (Retail e-Financial Client Access) <http://www.meridien-research.com/doc.asp?docid=820>

Technologists may not be uttering "XML" with quite the battle-cry zeal they did last year, but XML standardization efforts trudge on. XML remains a crucial consideration for organizations as they make their technology decisions. This report updates a previous Meridien report on XML, which focused largely on the business-to-business marketplace arena. Much of the immense market push in that direction has slowed along with the rest of the economy. In the meantime, belt-tightening and budget scrutiny are leading many institutions to pursue internal initiatives that can for now bring them more immediate and assured return on investment than might more outwardly focused, multi-institution efforts. This report updates some of the standardization efforts and provides some new coverage in an effort to shed light on the areas where the financial industry will more than likely focus in the next several years.

3. Buy-Side OMS: Several Steps Closer to STP (Emerging Trading Technologies Client Access) <http://www.meridien-research.com/doc.asp?docid=823>

Order management systems, or OMSs, facilitate the intrafirm processing of securities trading. The growth and acceptance of processing power and networking technologies have allowed OMSs to expand beyond simple order management. This growth has encouraged the centralization of several front-, middle-, and back-office and compliance functionalities into one solution. As straight-through processing becomes more important for firms, an OMS offers a relatively easy and proven way of starting down this road. This report examines the components of an OMS, various vendors providing OMS solutions, the OMS marketplace, and how a buy-side firm uses OMS technology.

Latest Findings from Meridien:

1. Get Smart: Intelligent Order Routing and the Institutional Investor (Emerging Trading Technologies Client Access)

<http://www.meridien-research.com/doc.asp?docid=3D734> (Wholesale eFinancial Client Access)

<http://www.meridien-research.com/doc.asp?docid=3D735>

Institutional investors, like their individual counterparts, want to get the best possible execution of their order. While some institutional investors have been improving their order management strategies and technology throughout the 1990s, the buy side as a whole is only now realizing that it needs to pay closer attention to how orders are treated to determine the true operating costs of a mutual or pension fund. New technologies are emerging that are helping them educate themselves and trade smarter. One such technology, intelligent order routing, is a direct response to the emergence of more-and more fragmented-marketplaces. Initially embraced by day traders trading via direct access brokers, this technology is now making its way up the food chain. This report looks at various definitions of intelligence in order routing, focusing in particular on institutional investors. At the end of the day, it is not so much about establishing a standard definition of best execution as it is about making sure that the investing firm (or individual) feels that it has sufficient control of the order.

2. Connecting with Customers: CRM Touches Retail Broker/Dealers in the USA (Customer Interaction Client Access) <http://www.meridien-research.com/doc.asp?docid=3D736> Many financial institutions are devoting considerable attention to figure out how to serve the wealth management needs of individuals. We have noted a growing, almost feverish pitch among a rapidly expanding number of application and platform vendors that claim wealth management and/or investment management as a solution focus. This brief examines the state of the retail investor marketplace in the United States, which represents the most logical view of the investment management opportunity. We conclude with our perspective of life cycle opportunities and technology solution capabilities that financial institutions should consider to remain effective competitors. A related Customer Knowledge research brief, "Analytical CRM: Understanding Customer Needs, LTV, and Retail Broker/Dealer Business Models" (Vol. 4, Brief 7, June 7, 2001), examines relevant analytical challenges and opportunities.

3. Analytical CRM: Customer Needs, LTV, and Retail Broker/Dealer Business Models (Customer Knowledge Client Access) <http://www.meridien-research.com/doc.asp?docid=3D737>

Retail broker/dealers in the United States face a dilemma: as they strive to excel in the delivery of topnotch investment services, they must find enough retail investors of the right types. Our companion Customer Interaction research brief "Connecting with Customers: CRM Touches Retail Broker/Dealers in the USA" (Vol. 4, Brief 8, June 7, 2001) defines the retail investor marketplace and the role of customer interaction technology solutions. In this brief, we examine business models and relevant analytical challenges and opportunities.

4. Wireless Payments at the Point of Sales: Expanding Possibilities (e-Payments Client Access) <http://www.meridien-research.com/doc.asp?docid=3D738> Financial institutions face a choice: they can participate in developing new wireless payment technologies, or they can sit on the sidelines as others take the lead. If they don't get involved, they risk disintermediation by entities like telcos that are not hesitating to jump into the driver's seat with wireless. This report examines the present state of wireless technology and the competing standards that are available today. It also looks at mobile telecommunications firms and their motivations to promote wireless payments. The report contains three case studies of wireless payments programs: one a joint bank/telco initiative, one a bank initiative, and one a company initiative.

Tanya,

This is a follow-up to my two calls this morning. I have talked to Pat Ebert at Ashland. I asked her why they refuse to pay their October 2001 invoices. She said that her management wants to speak to someone in upper management at Enron. I asked to speak to her manager and was told that she was in a meeting. I asked her to get her out of the meeting. She did not comply. Her managers name is Sherry Tackett. Her phone number is 614-790-6941. I left her a message. I told her that I expect payment for the ENA upstream, for 559,000+, and for ENA for 374,000+. I also told her she received to commodity so the payment is due. I told her expect it today. I left my phone number and told her to call me as soon as possible.

Thanks, Tom McFatridge 58189

Cindy, I think we may have a few things missing. This is what Alagasco shows we have regarding contract numbers and expiration dates:

There are four old CES/ Bring cotracts which have been assigned over to ENA. They are:

Bring reference number #10170, volume of 20471 expires 12/31/00 (has associated demand fees) Alagasco ref # -- ENA No. 2, Sitara #-250042 Bring Reference number #10055, volume of 10000 expires 11/30/00 (has associated demand fees) Alagasco ref # -- ENA No. 1, Sitare #-250050

These are the only two contract Alagasco wants to terminate in accordance with the expiration date. In additon we have two other old Bring/CES contracts that have expiration dates in 2001 and 2002 that they have no intention of terminating, unless however ENA would allow them to which we would not since they have demand fees with escalators associated with them. They are:

Bring reference number #10219, volume of 5339, expires 10/31/01 (has associated demand fees) Alagasco ref # -- ENA No. 3, Sitare #250196 Please note that in the system we have the termination date is correct but the volume is incorrect. It reflects 10,000 and you can see that the date ranges have been split each month by Joe Casas, whom changes the volume in the scheduled section to 6,045 to account for fuel and what Alagasco is actually taking. This needs to be corrected. .Again, Alagasco has no intention of terminating this contract.

Bring reference number #10326, volume of 10,000 during the winter only, months Nov - March , (has associated demand fees) Alagasco ref # -- ENA No.4 This deals expires October 31, 2002. Sitara # --250186 This is the contract that allows Alagasco swing rights in which they have yet to exercise. AT one point Scott Neal had mentioned to try to work on taking this swing language out of the contract but I have not mentioned anything to them since they have yet to exercise those swing rights and I did not want to bring it to there attention. I do not know how much the demand fees are on this cotrtract , but I would assume they are significant.

Alagasco has sent two termination letters to cancel the first two above contracts, only. i.e.-- Bring ref #'s 10170 & 10055. ENA does reflect these properly in the system so I believe we should be able to terminate these contracts. The other two contracts have nothing to do with the two termination letters Alagasco sent us. In additon, the two seasonal contracts that were done in Apirl & May 00 between Roger and myself, Sitara deals 242653 & 271301; Algasco would like to tie these contracts to the newly signed Enron Portfolio Master Firm Contract whlich I also agree with.

All deals look accurate in Sitara regarding term and volume except for Sitare # 250196, which I mentioned above. I do not know the demand fees associated with the contracts so I do not know if they are in the system accurately or if they are being billed accurately.

Cindy, I think this information should be everything we need to clear up the confusion regarding Alagasco's pending terminaiton letter. Please get with me once you have a minute. Thank you.

ENRONONLINE TRADERS

Before you begin trading your EnronOnline products on March 1st ...

Review the dates on your products.

We are in the process of converting "regular" products to "Tokenized Reference Period" Products.

A Tokenized Reference period product is one which the system sees as "Day Ahead", "Month Ahead", "Month Ahead +1", etc - but this is not what you or your customers see. At midnight every night, the system checks the current date and then CHANGES the dates shown on the Product Description. For example, if Product #20451 is "Month+1", then on Feb. 28, the Short Description on the Website and in Stack Manager would show "April1-30". However, on March 1, the system will automatically change the date of Product #20451 to show "May1-31". Note that the Product number stays the same, but the date has automatically updated.

When all of your Products use Tokenized Reference Periods, this works fine - your links all stay on the same relative date (links are between Product Numbers, not between Product Short Descriptions, so as the date changes, it might look like your links are changing, but in fact they have stayed on the same Product all the time - only the date changed).

Believe it or not, changing to Tokenized Reference Periods will make your life easier in the long run - you will not have to continually create new Products and links. Links between Products which share the same dates should continue in effect as the dates of both the Parent and Child change together.

The important thing to remember here is that for monthly Products which have Rolling Tokenized Reference Periods, the dates will continue to change automatically on the 1st day of each new month.

For example:

On Feb. 28, the "Prompt Month" product will be March; but on March 1, it will become April, etc. On Feb. 28, the "Prompt +1 Month" product will be April; but on March 1, it will become May. etc.

To verify if your product has a Tokenized Reference Period or if it has a specific date, please review your product in Product Manager under the 1st tab marked "Product Details." Your product will be "Tokenized" if it has the following applications:

There will be a check mark in the box after "Lifespan Tokenized?" The term "Prompt Month" or "Prompt Month +1" will be displayed in the next scroll-down box.

If you have any questions about the set-up of your products, please contact the following members of the EnronOnline Product Control Group: Rob Cass x 35491 Kevin Meredith x 39555 Melba Lozano x 58986 Chris Walker x 37533

Scott,

As discussed yesterday we really appreciate your help in moving the negotiations along for the Master with Williams Energy Marketing & Trading Company.

Just to give you some facts: We do have a GISB with Williams, of which they are the Confirming Party. Williams has made a decision not to confirm any deals less than a month in term, this is breach of contract. We currently have over 800 deals pending execution as they are not sending paper.

We have been unsuccessful for several months and the hold-up seems to be with Williams Legal group. Their Credit group is in favor of this Master as I understand it. Below are the several people we have been in contact with over the last several months.

Executive Impact & Influence Program * IMMEDIATE ACTION REQUIRED - Do Not Delete *

An essential element of the Executive Impact and Influence Program is the feedback, which will be provided to you by others in the organization.

The Team Selection process allows you to identify those people from whom you wish to receive feedback (i.e., your immediate Manager, each Direct Report, and Colleagues/Peers). Please keep in mind that the most pertinent feedback will come from people with whom you interact on a regular and frequent basis.

It will also be important for you to request feedback from all your direct reports, at least five or six colleagues/peers, and your immediate boss(s). If you do not get feedback from AT LEAST three direct reports and three colleagues/peers, those two groups will be combined in your feedback report.

Team Selection and subsequent feedback collection are now being administered primarily via the Internet. After you have completed the Team Selection process, each of your raters will receive an email with an Internet address and password to go online and submit feedback for you.

It is important that you complete your Team Selection NO LATER THAN CLOSE OF BUSINESS on Tuesday, October 3.

To begin the Team Selection process, you will need the following Internet address and Password.

Open your Internet browser e.g., Internet Explorer or Netscape Navigator, and please type or copy the URL address below into your Internet browser (please DO NOT go through Lotus Notes):

Cove Point LNG Completes Open Season With 3 Pacts

HOUSTON -(Dow Jones)- Cove Point LNG Limited Partnership, a subsidiary of Columbia Energy Group (CG) Friday completed its open season for firm liquid natural gas (LNG) tanker discharging service at its Cove Point terminal near Lusby, Md., the company said.

Cove Point LNG executed binding agreements with Coral LNG Inc., El Paso Merchant Energy-Gas, LP (EPG) and a subsidiary of BP Amoco Corp. (BPA). The three customers will begin service agreements upon receipt of regulatory approvals.

The open season process for the proposed service began Feb. 16, with the new service providing 4.25 billion cubic feet of storage capacity and 750 million cubic feet per day of terminal and pipeline capacity to accommodate LNG imports by the three companies.

The open season agreements also provide for a 2.5 Bcf (vapor equivalent) storage capacity expansion of Cove Point's Lusby, Md. location.

Cove Point anticipates filing an application with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to provide the LNG tanker discharging service, to recommission Cove Point marine facilities and to construct new storage facilities including the new LNG storage.

Columbia Energy Group agreed to sell partnership interests in Cove Point LNG Limited Partnership to Williams Cos. (WMB) subsidiaries for $150 million. The transaction should be complete in July, the companies said Friday.
