Enron Center South Technology Watch

File	ruscitti-k/inbox/257.

Welcome to Enron Center South. As you have probably already noticed, things look a little different here. We wanted to orientate you to your new environment and inform you about the future technology coming on-line in the coming weeks.

Occupancy Guidebook To Enron Center South You will find this handy guide on your desk; it contains information concerning the enhanced printer environment, the new easy access keyboards and telephony procedures.

NEC Monitors The NEC monitors have an internal anti-glare screen to help reduce eye strain and eliminate the need to install an additional screen cover. Additionally, an integrated speaker has been installed on one monitor for each desk.

Turret Users An "Alliance MX turret quick reference guide" has been placed on your desk; this includes important information about the new features such as "Caller ID" and "Voicemail Indication".

Increased Information Access There are many NEC 50" Plasma screens installed on the 5th and 6th floors. While many of these will be displaying information designed for the specific unit, others will be displaying various television channels. The audio to these television channels can be accessed via any of your telephony equipment. Here's how:

Ten audio channels have been set up for access from your either your Avaya telephone, Stentophon, or IPC Turret. The channels have been defined on Page 15 of your Turret. To access the audio from either your Avaya or Stentophon, simply dial the extensions shown in the table below:

Channel Avaya Stentophon Weather Channel 12401 801 CNN Headlines News 12402 802 CNN Financial News 12403 803 CNBC 12404 804 MSNBC 12405 805 Bloomberg 12406 806 Financial News Network 12407 807 CNN 12408 808 Fox Sports 12409 809 ESPN1 12410 810

Wireless Telephony You may notice the cellular phone coverage is not consistent across the floor, and some areas have virtually no coverage at all. We are implementing a multi-network "in-building" system to provide consistent high quality service for the campus, keeping you in touch while you are on the move.

Wireless LAN The infrastructure to support Wireless LAN technology is in place and is being tested. We will be implementing multi level encryption and security to keep our intellectual property safe from eavesdroppers or hackers.

Amtel Replacement As a move to provide a more flexible "Plug n Play" environment and to help with the reduced desk footprint, we have replaced the Amtel message boxes with Microsoft Exchange Instant Messaging. The Global Messaging Team is testing additional software products to provide some of the features not available with Exchange Instant Messaging; these include one-touch response keys, external LED display, and printing. Updates will be provided as they become available.

Keeping an Open forum We will keep you informed of the changes and developments as the migration to the building continues, please feel free to respond with any comments, queries or suggestions to <mailto:Enron.Center.South.Technology@enron.com>

Hey Kev,

Good to hear from you. Hope all is well. Well we out here in the Golden State could certainly use some help from you and the boys at Enron..... Gray Davis is a little mouse! That about describes most peoples opinion of him. The power and natural gas situation out here is a mess! The gas situation is much worse for us at this point here in Long Beach. We haven't seen any power outages or any significant increase in our bill either. The gas front is an entirely different matter! I just paid a $300 bill for the month of Dec. I paid $100 for the same month in 1999. The usage (therms) was the same..... figure that one out?!?! At that level I might as well be paying for heating oil in Maine. Most people I talk to have scene their gas bill go up 2 or 3 fold.

Anyway, things could be a whole lot worse I guess. Luke just had his 1st birthday party this past weekend. It was quite the scene. I think his next party will be when he is 18. Say hello to Lisa for us.

C'mon you can play 18 then do housework all afternoon. If you're just starting you don't get many invitations! Truthfully, I'm usually napping after golf, you're always surprised how tired you get after 18 holes!

I've gotten some interest from various groups within EES, EGM and hopefully Industrial Markets, but it's tough. Everybody is cautious, nobody's going gangbusters. I've been pounding the pavement almost full time for 2 weeks. Need to close something before heading back to Seoul. I brought my family back to Houston and they're staying, but I'll head back to Seoul in a week or 2.

p.s. thanks for your lead on Mike Curry, but he had just hired a manager so nothing for now.
