Hi Fletcher,

Allan is out of pocket right now, otherwise he would contact you. He understands you're accustomed to receiving outstanding service from PIRA and we can assure this will continue under a PIRA - UBS Warburg relationship.

I'm an analyst in PIRA electricity group and am also responsible for working with prospective clients on licensing PIRA's services and determining annual fees.

Looking forward to hearing from you.

Allan Stewart asked me to contact you. We appreciate your interest in PIRA Energy Group's energy analytical services.

Attached is a description of PIRA's service offerings and an Excel file showing a price matrix with annual fees. Our base retainer service is for up to 10 users at one site (office location) under a site license agreement. One retainer is $25,000 (e.g., natural gas), two retainers are $35,000 (e.g., electricity and natural gas) and three retainers are $40,000 (add oil). Fees for additional services such as emissions market intelligence and the daily electricity demand forecast are shown to the right of the main table. Clients with users of PIRA's services in multiple offices can arrange a site license for higher usage. PIRA's clients range from the top 20 natural gas and power marketers, to every major gas and oil producer, to large financial institutions, to energy end users. Feel free to call or write about the services. My colleagues and I would be delighted to have UBS Warburg as a client. Hi Fletch,

Thanks for returning my call and for taking the time to look over this cover letter with attached resume. I should be heading out to the driving range one of these weeknights. Drop me line if you're interested?

I'm looking for a position on the Enron energy trading floor. The personal and professional qualities that make me a successful mutual fund wholesaler will make me a strong contributor to your trading team. As my resume reflects, I have plenty of analytical skills combined with hands-on fixed income and equity trading. I have consistently grown business because I pay attention to details and thrive in a fast-paced environment. My experience and success in developing business has come about through learning quickly, planning ahead, and working well within a team environment. From Kevin Presto:

Attached is the spreadsheet version of the template we discussed this morning. I have added the additional columns everyone requested. I would now like the business unit leads to fill in the blanks such that we have an initial Power Implementation Plan that can be delivered to Louise on Friday.

With respect to East Power (I am out Thursday and Friday), I am delegating to all of my desk heads the responsibility the following: 1) Have all of the forms attached spreadsheet forms complete 2) A product offering sheet is added to the template.

Fletch & Dana - Please take the lead on creating the product offering list (physical and financial). My recommendation is we put products out through 03 for all regions (financial and physical). Obviously, the physical products will be contingent on receiving a power marketing license.

Cory and Don Baughman - Please take a crack at identifying all of the transmission service agreements we need for the East (Christi has started a list already).

The transmission agreement list attached can be used to prioritize or assign commercial people to transmission/pool agreements. It is not correct on the timing under the pools, so don't rely on that column.

Please call me on my cell (713-856-3923) with any questions.

Comments on term sheet ISO/RTO Effect, small typo: EPMI shall have the right, but [not] the obligation Conditions [Precedent]: Forming a control area is news to me, how did we come to this conclusion? I understand it to be very expensive.

Due Diligence Items: Will IP sell EPMI schedules 3-6 of their current OATT separate from the other cost components of this tariff? Are there any market offers for schedules 3, 5 & 6 from existing merchant generators? What are the logistical requirements to serve this type of load in Illinois. I was on a MAIN Planning Committee conference call this morning concerning Electric System Security. This a technical group so I was probably overlooked as being a marketer. Naturally the discussion revolved around potential targets and how to protect them from terrorist attacks. The part that was disturbing was their desire to severely limit information that is currently in the public domain. I relayed that I understood the need to protect critical grid components but limiting all information was equally damaging economically. Some comments made implied that "you can't tell who has the information with marketers because they change jobs so much" and "you need to keep info from people with loose lips" There was no direct comment linking marketers and loose lips, but the whole undertone was that information might not be as safe with marketers. I have asked Andy to work with on a response to MAIN MIC and NERC. ds

NERC is apparently moving forward aggressively on their initiative to restrict access to market information. Doug Sewell, who participates on the MAIN Planning Committee, was on a call this morning in which members of MAIN and NERC's Virginia Sulzberger discussed ways to limit access to information. A new disturbing angle was that apparently, some members indirectly alleged that marketers have "higher turnover" and "loose lips," and were using this as a scare tactic to indicate why the information should be restricted (potentially even from legitimate consumers like us).

If I remember correctly, we were going to contact NERC to let them know our opinions on this issue. It sounds like perhaps they are not being addressed sufficiently. Doug has suggested we should bring it up at the MAIN MIC meeting; do we want to begin a campaign to protect our access to this data? I think that without getting more involved, this will be yet another industry "de facto" standard that is created under the assumption that silence is consent (even if we're not told about the changes). We should probably talk about this all today on our conference call.

The last I heard, the MISO is supposed to begin offering service on their OASIS tomorrow for service starting January 1. I wanted to let all of you know a bit about where we stand with regards to that process.

I have been working with several different folks here and at the MISO to ensure that we are ready to do business with the MISO and request service. The MISO OASIS seems to be accepting our Tradewave Certs, so we just need to get our MISO login for their systems. Today, the MISO will be sending out logins to their systems via FedEx, and should arrive prior to 10am. Christi Nicolay will be receiving this information and distributing it as soon as it arrives.

Unfortunately, the MISO has been (as you probably know) cutting things closer and closer to the edge. This login was supposed to be delivered a couple weeks ago, but they have just gotten around to sending it out. Hopefully, we will not have any problems with it once it arrives. As I understand it, there should be only one login set up for "EPMI 24-Hour Operations," with a login of "Enron." The password is currently only known by the MISO, but should be contained in the letter we receive tomorrow.

This login is a temporary one until we complete our final registration. This final registration has been a bit more of a pain, as it has involved contractual agreements and credit obligations. I am still working with our Legal, Credit, and AP folks to get everything set up. Again, the MISO sent the final documents out fairly recently, and we have not had a great amount of time to review, analyze, and negotiate their terms. Hopefully, we will have come to agreement with MISO about those items, and be able to file that final application soon.

If you have any questions or concerns, you can reach me at my desk (X53771) or via my cellular (713-927-4680). Obviously, you can also call Christi (X37007) or Susan Lindberg (X30596) as well.
