Laura, Barry, Chris and Frank,

Thank you for giving Mastio & Company the opportunity to discuss our market research capabilities for customer satisfaction and benchmarking.

Mastio & Company would like to have the privilege of building a relationship with you and assisting your efforts in maximizing customer satisfaction and delight. We believe that meeting customer needs, and exceeding expectations is not only one of the most important business processes, but also builds loyalty and increases profits.

We would be delighted to have you subscribe to the 2001 multi-client Natural Gas Marketer Customer Satisfaction Study. The main benefit of Mastio's multi-client report is, not only will you be able to discover what customers think of you on 30+ customer service attributes, you will also learn what customers think of 45+ other gas marketers, as well. This study will be an excellent tool if you want to maximize & improve customer satisfaction, measure & plot progress for improving customer service, benchmark yourself against competitors, retain & find new customers and build customer loyalty. Mastio & Company is convinced you would reap substantial benefits by discovering your perceived level of customer satisfaction. As in other highly competitive industries, natural gas marketers are discovering that ignoring customer dissatisfaction can be a crucial mistake. The bottom line is, superior customer service is a given these days, not a difference. Customers now take superior customer service for granted. Customers are raising their expectations. Leading companies are responding to this trend by instituting customer service initiatives and measuring their progress, versus customer needs and their competition. Customer satisfaction matters with winning companies, especially for companies interested in profitable growth. These leading companies have actually moved customer satisfaction from a slogan to reality. They have made a commitment to value and are realizing superior growth and profitability because their business strategies focus on enhancing the value of what they offer customers. I would like to further point out that our report comes with an electronic version. The electronic version allows the segmentation of all the respondents by state, volume, and customer-type, switching status, head to head comparisons with competitors, etc. The software can be installed on your network and up to 50 people can query the software at the same time. The biggest advantage is the custom tagging feature. This feature allows the grouping of your customers, for example, by the key person responsible for interaction, customer service teams by name, territory, profitability, strategic importance, etc. The options are unlimited. This powerful tool will empower people to do additional analysis on their own. They will take ownership, because the analysis of the data is personalized. Media information about Mastio - (video and articles) - <http://www.mastio.com/press/newsgas.html>

In closing, Mastio & Company would welcome the opportunity to deliver you actionable information when you are ready.

Sincerely, MASTIO & COMPANY

Judy, you were assigned to my U.S and Canadian tax returns. I am a employee of Enron North America and previously was an employee of Enron Canada in Calgary.

As we had discussed at the time of my filing, I was never given any advise on my relocation to the U.S. regarding tax issues, As such I am not sure what some of my next moves should be. I very much require some assistance regarding spousal employment. My wife is a registered nurse and would like to work in the U.S., but I have been advised that this may affect my filing in the U.S. and perhaps could cost me more in U.S. Taxes.

Can we set up a meeting to discuss strategies on making sure I am going about this properly.

This is my home e-mail address, you can contact me here or at my work address, Barry.Tycholiz@enron.com.

Thanks in advance.

Stephanie:

We have released our RFP for the pipeline capacity and Wallula tolling. I will be sending you an original copy via FEDEX, but wanted you to have the enclosed copy for expediency. I have also attached the heat balance diagram (which is Attachment 3 to the Reverse RFP) so that your technical people can have a basis to start from. Attachments 1 and 2 you already have through the PGT open season process, but we will include the version that we executed in the FEDEX package. Let me know if you have any questions.

10/31/2001 16:33:09 Key Enron Employees Aren't Jumping Ship, Recruiters Say Dow Jones International News Service via Dow Jones By Michael Rieke Of DOW JONES NEWSWIRES HOUSTON (Dow Jones)--Enron Corp.'s (ENE) current problems aren't sending its key employees running for the door, according to two executive recruiters. While employees at Enron's underperforming units are shopping around for new jobs, those working for its core wholesale energy trading and retail energy units seem content, the recruiters told Dow Jones Newswires. "We've been getting resumes from their international group over the last year," said Bruce Peterson, managing director for Korn Ferry in Houston. "But its been a very well-known fact that they're getting out of those businesses." Another Houston recruiter, who didn't want to be identified, said he has gotten "a flood" of resumes from employees at Enron's natural gas and power assets in South America. Employees at Enron's broadband unit are also sending out resumes, said the recruiter. That business has brought the company losses of more than $100 million this year despite hundreds of layoffs. Enron continues to cut costs in its telecom business. Neither recruiter has seen many resumes from Enron's big moneymakers - the wholesale energy trading group and the retail energy services group. Some of the lower-level employees of those units have sent out resumes but Peterson said he hasn't seen higher-level executives in the job market. However, he attached a caveat to that statement. "Quite a few of the senior people at Enron have left over the last 6-12 months," he said. When Enron's share

price was flying high last year and early this year, some of Enron's top executives cashed out their stock options and left the company. Those executives included Cliff Baxter, former vice chairman and chief strategy officer; Ken Rice, former head of Enron Capital and Trade as well as former chief executive of Enron Broadband Services; Kevin Hannon, former president of Enron Broadband Services; and Lou Pai, former chairman and chief executive of Enron Energy Services. The lure of cashing out lucrative stock options won't cost Enron any more employees any time soon. The company's share price has fallen too far too quickly, leaving the options underwater. The company's shares traded as high as $80 early this year. By July the price had dropped to around $50, leaving employees with options that were virtually worthless. So Enron told employees it would issue new options in August. But the company's share price continued to fall as more and more bad news came out. The new options issued in August, when the share prices were around $40, are now underwater also. Now that the options are out of the money, Enron employees are more vulnerable to the lure of other companies, Peterson said. Enron could face another problem in keeping key people. Its employees work under two-year contracts. If they leave Enron before their contracts expires, a noncompete clause could prevent them for working for a competitor. Some of those contracts will expire at the end of the year. Without the incentive of lucrative stock options, Enron might have a difficult time getting employees to agree to new contracts with a noncompete clause, Peterson said. An Enron spokeswoman said the company isn't planning to issue more new options to employees. -By Michael Rieke, Dow Jones Newswires; 713-547-9207; michael.rieke@dowjones.com

Judy, you were?assigned to my U.S and Canadian tax returns. I am a employee of Enron North America and previously was an employee of Enron Canada in Calgary.

As we had discussed at the time of my filing, I was never given any advise on my relocation to the U.S. regarding tax issues, As such I am not sure what some of my next moves should be.?I very much require some assistance?regarding spousal employment. My wife is a registered nurse and would like to work in the U.S., but I have been advised that this may affect my filing in the U.S. and perhaps could cost me more in U.S. Taxes.

Can we set up a meeting to discuss strategies on making sure I am going about this properly.

This is my home e-mail address, you can contact me here or at my work address, Barry.Tycholiz@enron.com.

Thanks in advance.

Just got off the phone with Rick Hawley--Puget's CFO. He was very cordial and indicated the company was interested in talking with us. We had a fairly open discussion of who we should contact. In the end, he suggested that we call Bill Gaines, VP Energy Supply. He said that as CFO he is head of the Risk Management Committee and that anything that was discussed with Bill would go through his committee. I highlighted the notion that we were interested in talking about services that could be helpful to their risk management efforts and that would be beneficial to both of our companies.

By the way, at the beginning of the call, I made clear that we were not talking about total outsourcing.

He didn't immediately respond, but in the context of our discussion re: who to talk to he stated that we should talk to him if we wanted to have a more strategic discussion on outsourcing. Then he said something to the effect of "of course, we're not at all interested in a more comprehensive outsourcing product."

Bill's number is 425.462.3145. He said that we can tell Bill, Rick suggested we call him directly.
