Subject: Enron OnLine

Thank you for your hospitality. There were a couple of questions I had regarding our visit, some of which we left you with before our return to Washington.

I understood Dave Forster to state that EOL does not collect data regarding where a customer's mouse is moving on the system. However, does EOL require customers to have cookies enabled? If yes, does EOL collect, use or manage data regarding cookies?

Also, why doesn't EOL publish a "ticker" of completed trades showing prices and quantities? Does EOL have any plans to start publishing such data? If yes, when?

In addition, how does the data collection from EOL/Enron Networks flow to the risk management groups? How is the information used?

Also, we assume that data regarding each trade is maintained by EOL. If yes, in what form and for how long?

Thanks

I'm sorry I haven't been more involved is setting this up, but I think the agenda looks kond of soft. At a minimum, I would like to turn the schedule around and hit the hard subjects like Q3, risk management, and asset sales first. I would also like to see a discussion on our funds flow, cash flow, and our balance sheet. If we don't get these things right, none of the rest of it matters.

Also, I notice that Cindy Olson and Beth Tilney are in attendance. This should only be for presentation, as they are not members of the management committee. It also seems a bit unusual to have Beth Tilney present for a discussion on company image and presentation, and not have Mark Palmer.

First, good luck next week.

Also, I will be in the office all next week and if you need anything, ENW related or not, call me or have someone call me and I will help. I am focused on making sure EOL and ENW do not pop up on your list of things to think about.

Webb and Richter have been told that EOL up and performing well is critical. As you know, the trade counts looked good last week and Jay and Brad have been getting data to Louise on the specifics of certain counterparties, etc.

I am having breakfast meetings with Directors and above in ENW all next week to listen to what they have been hearing and saying and to keep them informed, focused and motivated.

My extension is 36635 and my cell is 713-646-4734.

Thanks.

Dear Mr. Whalley,

Gartner Group says that over 50% of CRM installations fail "from a customer's point of view." Yankee says that 77% of companies who implement CRM applications find they do not "receive a distinct return on investment."

You know what you want: tangible business benefits. What has your return on investment been from your CRM implementation? 10%? 20%? More? Is there room for improvement in your organization's ability to implement decisions?

Elity InSight(tm) is a cooperative, event-processing software catalyst that helps Siebel customers detect important customer behavior patterns as they happen, so you can turn that data into timely, appropriate, profitable actions.

Lawrence G. Whaley Vice President Enron Gas Services P. O. Box 1188 Houston, TX 77251-1188 November 12, 2001

Dear Lawrence:

We are so pleased that Steve Kean will be speaking at our conference on Winning Globally: Organizing for Global Growth on January 23, 2002. As you may know, Steve will be speaking on a panel on "Maintaining Gold-Standard Ethics in a Global Era." We hope that you will be able to join us at the conference. We would also like to invite you or a company representative to participate in the 2002 International Career Fair at Stanford Graduate School of Business, which will be held on the previous evening, Tuesday, January 22, 5:00pm - 8:00pm.

The goal of the International Career Fair is to facilitate interaction between leading global companies and our talented MBAs looking for positions of international scope. The International Career Fair is strategically timed to coincide with our second -year students' full time job searches and to introduce you to first-year students interested in summer positions.

We anticipate over 300 second and first-year Stanford MBA students will participate in the career fair and will be seriously interested in your international opportunities. Importantly, from the graduating Class of 2001, 58% reported their jobs were international in scope, 83% indicated their company was international in scope, and 20% accepted positions in international locations.

The agenda is attached for your review. Participation is free. In addition, you will have the option to interview students at the Career Management Center interview rooms on Wednesday, January 23rd and Thursday, January 24th.

Please RSVP via our online form at <<http://wesley.stanford.edu/cmc/Recruiters/Forms/Ficf.html>>, before Monday, December 17th. Space is limited! Even if you do not know the exact company representative(s) you will send, please RSVP ASAP to reserve your company's participation, as space will be limited to the first 50 organizations. We recommend that your company representative be either: 1) a manager or director of business areas that hire MBA talent, or 2) human resources or global recruiting professionals who are responsible for recruiting MBAs.

Confirmation and additional information will be sent to you once we receive your RSVP. We look forward to your participation in this exciting annual event. If you have any questions, please contact Charlotte Carter at (650) 725-3236 or carter_charlotte@gsb.stanford.edu <mailto:carter_charlotte@gsb.stanford.edu>.

Dear Greg

We met some time ago for dinner in London together with Bruce Farmer. Since a lot of things at Enron are fluid at the moment I wanted to contact you to express Glencore's interest to acquire Enron's copper concentrates and metal book if this is an option Enron would consider. We understand that the staff in London responsible for these areas are working on a MBO and there is thus little interest from their side to be open or co-operative. This is the reason why I contact you directly and would appreciate hearing from you at your earliest convenience.

Due to the recent flooding in the Houston area, there has been a sharp demand in the need for rental cars. Availability in the area has been severely limited, increasing the burden on effected employees.

Together, Global Strategic Sourcing (GSS), HR-Work Life, Community Relations and The Travel Agency in the Park, have arranged for a limited number of vehicles to be reserved at Intercontinental Airport - Houston (IAH) through Enron's preferred car rental providers, National Car Rental and Alamo Rent-a-Car.

To obtain a rental vehicle, please contact The Travel Agency in the Park at 713-860-1189 between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m. and ask for Sheryl Blackman. The reserved vehicles are being held outside of the normal reservation system and will only be available through the Travel Agency in the Park.

* A quick look at the correlation between the performance of the Energy Technology stocks and the price changes in both natural gas and oil. * Our conclusion is that there is no meaningful statistical correlation over time. University of California, California State University and Enron Reach Settlement Agreement

ATTENTION: State, Business editors

OAKLAND, Calif., July 11 (AScribe News) -- The University of California, California State University and Enron Energy Services announced today a settlement agreement that will extend their contract for two years and return the two university systems to direct access service from Enron.

As part of the agreement, UC and the CSU will drop their lawsuit against Enron and Enron will dismiss its appeal. The two university systems had brought suit in federal court seeking to retain their status as direct access Enron customers after Enron had resourced their power procurement to the Southern California Edison and Pacific Gas&Electric utility companies.

"We are delighted that our negotiations with Enron have ended with retention of the two university systems as direct access Enron customers," said Joseph P. Mullinix, UC senior vice president for business and finance.

"The California State University is pleased that we have been able to resolve our differences with Enron and retain our direct access status," said Richard P. West, CSU executive vice chancellor and chief financial officer. "This agreement means considerable savings for the universities and allows us to continue with our energy conservation efforts."

"Enron has always been a strong advocate of the benefits of direct access, and we are pleased to be able to extend our contract for two years with UC/CSU," said Marty Sunde, vice chairman, Enron Energy Services.

"Separately, with the potential elimination of direct access for California customers, Enron is once again directly serving its commercial customers in California, including UC and CSU. As more and more customers in California see the importance of managing their price risk in power markets, commercial energy users have increased interest in our product offerings."

The current four-year contract with Enron is scheduled to end on March 31, 2002. The two-year extension, approved in principle, would continue the two university systems as direct access Enron customers until March 31, 2004.

Enron and the universities will negotiate price and other terms of the extension between now and Dec. 1, 2001. Both parties have the right to terminate the extension if an agreement is not reached by Dec. 1.

The agreement covers all UC campuses and the UC Office of the President, with the exception of UCLA and UC Riverside, which have agreements with their local municipalities. All CSU campuses, except Los Angeles, Northridge, Sacramento and Stanislaus, are part of the Enron contract, as is the CSU Office of the Chancellor.

Together, UC and CSU rank as the largest single user of electricity in California. UC's systemwide peak load is 332 megawatts, and CSU's is 117 megawatts. One megawatt powers approximately 1,000 homes.

Enron Net Works - Cost Savings

File	whalley-g/inbox/298.

We are prepared to get with you as soon as you would like after your return from New York to review projected cost savings from ENW. For each business unit that we support (EA, EGM, EIM, EES, EBS), we have prepared cost savings on expense and capital based on the three scenarios below.

Scenario 1: Enron exits the line of business, with immediate headcount reductions and cost savings quantified; skeleton staff remains for orderly exit of business; then final headcount reductions and cost savings quantified (Lights Out)

Scenario 2: Enron retains and maintains line of business, but does not invest for growth; assumes no further systems enhancements; support is scaled back from current level and is minimal (Lights On - But Dim)

Scenario 3: Enron retains line of business and invests modestly to accommodate known market changes; service levels are scaled back from current level and are a step above minimal (Lights On - Brighter)

Cost savings in all three scenarios have been quantified at the following level of detail by commodity for EGM and EIM:

EGM: Freight Markets EIM: Forest Products FX/IR/Equity Steel Domestic Crude & Products International Crude & Products Domestic Coal International Coal

Cost savings have been identified for ENW's unallocated expense and capital as well. We have worked with HR to adjust cost savings for anticipated severance costs.

Greg,

We are pushing ahead and have scheduled two hours with you on Thursday afternoon to review progress. I wanted to reconfirm the scope/focus of our effort with the attached chart.

As we discussed, our primary focus is around pushing the M&A case for action and options. This effort is well underway.

As we also discussed, we will push forward on the stock price valuation from the standpoint of (1) understanding the likely impact of potential disclosures/write-offs, and (2) assessing the value which Enron should attribute to the stock if you were to use it as an M&A currency. This step requires some recharacterization of baseline earnings and you expressed the concern that it would be difficult to address this topic prior to the completion of the budget process. We think we can approximate the impact more quickly through an alternative process, which we will describe on Thursday.

Finally, we think we should spend some time addressing fallback options besides M&A (see chart).

Please give me a call on my cell phone (713) 480-2087, or leave a voicemail at (713) 751-4309 to confirm that we are (or are not) on the right track. I look forward to seeing you Thursday.

Meet the head of the leading firm in our business

Meet the head of the leading firm in our business

Imagine the opportunity! Imagine that the leading energy company in the world has picked you to run= =20 the company that it expects to be the leading retail energy company in North=20 America.

So you get a sharp competitive edge in the back room, you recruit IBM as a= =20 co-owner assuring you the lowest cost per customer by a factor of two or three. To get your foot in 27 million doors you recruit AOL as a co-venturer with = a commitment from AOL to promote NewPower's wares. You do an IPO and take in about $700 million for working capital. The IPO is over and the quiet period it required. But the most important silver spoon -- so that you get your energy at the best price and to protect you against price spikes -- you get up front 30 Enron-trained risk managers and traders. Can you imagine having to recruit them?

To make sure this team is run by the optimum chief they picked Eugene Lockhart, most recently president of Consumer Services at AT&T and before that president of BankAmerica's Global Retail Bank with its consumer, commercial and small business banking services delivered through 3,000+ branches. Now, Lockhart's talking about his plans. Restructuring Today had lunch with Lockhart Thursday and reported in detail:

* How NewPower intends to actually start up the retail industry? What is the heart of NewPower's business plan?
 * How they'll make money in markets where margins may seem too thin. * How he's going to have 600,000+ customers next month and easily a million by the end of 2001. * What percentage of their sales come from the NewPower website. What figure is he using for cost of customer acquisition? * Lockhart plans to have by the end of the first quarter or at the latest the second quarter 750,000 customers making them by far the largest unregulated retail marketer in the US. * How does he think utilities will compete with the NewPower paradigm? * What marketshare do they expect to get at first and then by 2005? * What does he see as his biggest challenge? * Why is this a good time for NewPower to invade California markets? * Why will NewPower succeed where Enron failed? * What's the role of backward dating in forward market margins? * Where NewPower gives a 20-25% discount on the commodity portion of a bill, what kind of margin can it make now? * How do higher prices help NewPower? "We're actually in a very good position given (that) the gas cost increases perversely will work in our favor ... " * "We have a 10-year, exclusive agreement with IBM whereby we can issue a bill, collect the money and care for a customer at lower cost than anyone else in the industry by several orders of magnitude."

We'd love to send you the two-story, detailed report on how the leading company in our industry is going to get there and stay there.
