MEDIA ALERT September 25, 2000

Webcast/Teleconference: Tuesday September 26 11:00 a.m. PT

Turning On The Power Of E-Business For Energy Companies

Altra Energy Technologies and Epicentric Discuss New Alliance For Providing E-Business Solutions To The Energy Market

Brief Audio Webcast Followed by Q&A with Ahmad Atwan, Vice President of Altra E-Business Solutions and Kathleen Hayes, Vice President of Business Development For Epicentric, Inc.

Don't miss this opportunity to hear the latest developments for energy companies that are behind the curve on e-business. Altra Energy Technologies and Epicentric, Inc. will unveil a joint business alliance that will provide a first of its kind, end-to-end e-business solution for energy companies. The Altra E-Business Solutions subsidiary will combine the advanced portal integration technology of Epicentric with the industry leading energy trading and transaction management technology of Altra. The result of this business alliance will be an e-business portal that can be immediately deployed and specifically tailored to reflect the look and feel and private branding of individual energy companies. In addition, this solution will integrate pre-transaction decision support tools, the Altra energy trading exchange and post-transaction resources such as deal capture, scheduling and accounting applications. Altra and Epicentric will offer highly customized wholesale energy trading portal solutions, pipeline portal solutions and retail energy portal solutions to customers of the new subsidiary. Please join us to hear details of this milestone event for making e-business work for the energy market.

Subject: EnronOnline's Wireless offering

Dear Louise and Greg:

Fortune magazine's September article about your--virtually overnight--success building EnronOnline prompted me to contact you, mostly because our company's (Everypath, Inc.) wireless technology could be the perfect tool to help you move the EnronOnline marketplace into wireless by offering trading anytime, anywhere, via any wireless devices (as we've done for E*Trade, Fidelity, and others offering complex wireless transactions).

Very briefly, our company has quickly gained real traction in this space. We were honored as a Smithsonian Laureate this year, named by Forbes among the 25 Best of the Web in business to business, and recognized by CNet as one of ten "wireless companies to watch." Our partners include Sun Microsystems, Hewlett-Packard, Andersen Consulting and Cap Gemini Ernst & Young, as well as many others, and have already raised significant funding from investors such as Robertson Stephens, Comdisco, Dain Rauscher Wessels, Sevin Rosen, U.S Venture Partners, Andersen Consulting Ventures, Sun, and H & Q.

If you see commodities trading moving soon into wireless, just as you saw (or influenced) the industry to move online, shouldn't Enron lead the way in wireless trading too? We would love the opportunity to talk to you about helping you go wireless.

Let me know if I should follow-up with you or someone else in your group by sending an email or calling at any of the numbers below. I look forward to hearing from you, and to coming home to Houston to speak with you further about this (I practiced law in Houston for years with Weil, Gotshal & Manges--over in the NationsBank building on Louisiana).

Sincerely, David Marcus

Vanguard Venture Partners Energy Discussion

Sender	mark.lay@enron.com
Recipients	[greg.whalley@enron.com', 'kenneth.lay@enron.com', 'michael.miller@enron.com']
File	whalley-l/discussion_threads/464.

Dan Eilers of Vanguard Venture Partners contacted me last week to see if Enron would be interested in a high level discussion of the changes occurring in electricity generation and management technologies. Vanguard is an early stage VC fund that helped create Ciena and Network Appliance. Dan is a new partner and is looking at the energy market as a new focus for Vanguard.

He would like to have a brainstorming session with an eye on creating a cooperative relationship between Vanguard and Enron for the evaluation and development of new companies in the energy arena.

I would appreciate it if you could respond with your interest level so I could arrange a time that is convenient for each of you to participate.

Thanks, Mark

Many thanks for meeting with Bob and I last week. How ironic to find you working with one of my graduate school classmates, Gene Humphrey.

As we discussed, Vanguard is interested in exploring what kinds of opportunities may exist for venture investment in the energy arena. We think that the ultimate "internet (and everything) infrastructure" play is about clean, always on, electrical power. While we are not experts in the area, and are not yet certain it will be a productive area for venture capital investment of the type Vanguard does, we feel that there is a sufficient market need in multiple segments that there MAY be such an investment opportunity which it would make sense for us to pursue as an investment focus area. This could have value for Enron should we determine investment areas which are symbiotic with Enron and which we could collaborate on, as we help catalyze/create/fund exciting new companies.

As we discussed we would love to participate in a brainstorming and perspective setting session with visionary and strategic Enron executives who have domain knowledge and an interest. Our potential interest areas span from generation (alternatives, distributed, and conventional) to transmission to distribution to storage...fixed and mobile. We appreciate your offer to pull together an Enron group for such a brainstorming...and I would be quite happy to fly down to Houston again in order to engage in such a session.

As always we appreciate your interest in Vanguard.

Dorothy,

Per our discussion, Ken and Kevin would like Greg Whaley and Cliff Baxter to interview a candidate for a VP, Network Engineering and Operations in EBS. His name is Doug Kelly and he is tentatively scheduled to see Ken and Kevin on Monday, November 20. Mr. Kelly has already interviewed with Kevin and several of EBS management. He is our top candidate for this role and we are trying to move quickly.

I appreciate you sending a note to both Greg and Cliff's assistants regarding their availability to interview Mr. Kelly.

They can contact Gloria Alvarez at 58059 to coordinate.

Greg Whalley Vice Chairman & CEO, Enron Net Works LLC Managing Director, Enron Corp. PO Box 1188 Houston, TX 77251-1188

VIA E-MAIL: WHALLEY@ENRON.COM

Dear Greg:

To follow with my phone message, please consider accepting a keynote speech for Interactive Energy, Tuesday morning, Oct. 24, in Houston. We've confirmed either the head of the E-Commerce Practice or the North American Energy Practice from McKinsey and have issued invitations to Tim Ling, the chairman of TradeRanger (the Shell, BP, Unocal procurement hub), and John Leggate, Group Vice President, IT at BP.

Interactive Energy has grown to be the largest and most prestigious e-strategy event (see www.interactiveenergy.com). Skilling gave the keynote last year, announcing the launch of Enron Online. Divisional presidents from Halliburton, Equiva, Vastar and Reliant Energy participated in the keynote session. More than 1,450 executives attended. Given the large number of early registrations and the strong program, we expect this year's to be much larger.

Ideally, you would give a one-year update on the growth of the EOL and describe your vision for Enron's future e-business initiatives and objectives in this area. The target audience for the conference is senior energy management who are integrating technology into their core business strategies.

Interactive Energy 2000, which will have more than 100 speakers, will cover technology development across five sectors:

1) Upstream 2) Transportation & Logistics 3) Processes (refining, petrochem, power gen. and gas processing) 4) Wholesale 5) Retail

Press Coverage: The conference has been a high priority for the trade press as well as the general media. At previous years' events, we had editors from more than twenty general business and trade publications, including the Wall Street

Journal, FT Energy, Oil & Gas Journal, Oil & Gas Investor, World Oil, Bloomberg, PR Newswire, Dow Jones New Retrieval and others. National Public Radio and All Things Considered aired interviews of our key speakers. As result of last year's success, we have numerous media sponsors this year, including Energy Markets, McGraw Hill, Oil & Gas Investor, Houston Business Journal, PR Newswire, Utility IT, Petroleum Economist, EnergyCentral.com, Energy Commerce and others.

Benefits:

Enron Net Works will benefit in four ways:

? First, you will educate customers and partners. Cisco is bringing some 70 senior utility executives from Europe to attend; they would be most interested in your perspectives. Energy buyers from such organizations as Ford, United Technologies and e-Mall (an eight-state buying consortium) have attended in previous years.

? Second, you will motivate management from such vendors as Ariba, Luminant, IBM, i2 and SAP and many others to develop IT solutions specific to Enron's vision.

? Third, you will educate employees. Some 43 executives from Enron attended last year's event.

? Fourth, you will persuade recruits. Capable professionals in this area are in high demand. Rising stars of the energy industry will learn of Enron's innovations and rapid growth.

I hope that your calendar is clear. Look forward to the possibility of working with you and your staff. I'll call to follow up.

Greg,

Your keynote address hit the nail on the head this morning; it has already spawned constructive discussions and debates, such as what services will the core exchange(s) offer, what are secondary and tertiary strategies, and how will various companies in the value chain support and benefit from the exchanges. One editor commented that your presentation offered stark contrast to the Chevron presentation during lunch, which was a much more passive "bring the horse to water" approach. Tomorrow and Thursday's presentations will address many of your points more fully.

Thank you very much for taking the time to drive out. I realize how difficult carving a morning from your schedule can be. However, the industry benefited from your insights. Hopefully, Enron Net Works will receive some high-quality prospects and/or recruits in return.

Yours sincerely,

Greg,

You and I met at your office last summer to discuss Aprimo's Marketing Management Solution. At the time, you indicated that there would be other people at Enron that I should speak with. My assigned territory changed shortly after our meeting, and I did not follow-up on these contacts. I am once again responsible for Enron, and would appreciate your direction to the appropriate individuals at Enron.

Our web-based solution has been adopted by over 60 leading companies over the past 18 months. They are seeing rapid value from Aprimo's unique ability to help them Grow Top-Line Revenue (more effective Marketing) and Reduce Bottom-line Cost (more efficient Marketing). With the opportunities facing Enron, I'm certain that maximizing your Marketing Investments is of interest to the Executive Team and your Shareholders.

Our solution is delivering improvements across all Marketing Functions, such as:

- Event Management - Marcom - Marketing Financial Management - Strategic Planning - Direct Marketing - Web Response - Lead Management

Leading Analysts have identified Aprimo as the clear leader in Enterprise Marketing Management. I would like to arrange brief discovery meetings with some of the individuals responsible for Marketing's contribution to Enron's growth.

I would appreciate any direction that you and Liz can provide.

To: <Greg.Whalley@enron.com> cc: Subject: Keynote feedback

Greg,

Your keynote address hit the nail on the head this morning; it has already spawned constructive discussions and debates, such as what services will the core exchange(s) offer, what are secondary and tertiary strategies, and how will various companies in the value chain support and benefit from the exchanges. One editor commented that your presentation offered stark contrast to the Chevron presentation during lunch, which was a much more passive "bring the horse to water" approach. Tomorrow and Thursday's presentations will address many of your points more fully.

Thank you very much for taking the time to drive out. I realize how difficult carving a morning from your schedule can be. However, the industry benefited from your insights. Hopefully, Enron Net Works will receive some high-quality prospects and/or recruits in return.

Yours sincerely,

In providing an answer to our questions regarding risk assessment or management, would you please provide an explanation to the following? We understand that EOL requires that a counter party, before accessing EOL to do business with Enron North America, must undergo a credit worthiness evaluation. When a counter party executes or clicks on a price, EOL does an instant credit check before confirming the transaction.

However, Enron may not only buy from a counter party, it may sell. What sort of creditworthiness standards must Enron provide to a counter party utilizing EOL to purchase from Enron?

Are there industry standard creditworthiness agreements regarding counter party credit risk that Enron uses? If yes, may we have copies? If Enron utilizes its own agreements, please provide us with a copy.

Thank you.

Updage on GBUCs/2Xchange and an interesting 100 million dollar

To all:

We continue to make progress on the EPP (electronic payment platform) and are we are actually testing some modules internally. The market continues to migrate toward our space, which hopefully means there will be a greater understanding of what our system can do. The existing 1.2 trillion dollar market is possibly bigger than we thought. We are having conversations with several Fortune 500 companies who do non-cash trading in an effort to ascertain the size of each of their current markets.

We are heavily involved in our current raise of 5 MM. While we are in discussions with a few organizations, we would be interested in speaking with anyone who has an interest in a large market, experienced management team, closed loop settlement platform, and a company with "HIDDEN VALUE". So if you are aware of either angels with $100,000 or more to invest or seed or start-up VC's who can bring $5 Million to the table, let us know.

In today's market it is often difficult to determine true value in a corporation, much less the hidden value. This "hidden" value is often called "IP" or Intellectual Property. On that front, the good news for us is; We own our Intellectual Property! Why is this important you may ask?

Well, a business associate of mine at a company called Neo Media (NEOM) just recently signed a 100 MILLION DOLLAR PLUS licensing agreement for their suite of patents. This is extremely encouraging as the market NEOM is in is dwarfed in comparison to the global trade market where our IP is based. We have been very diligent in filing the IP documents and the attorney's have issued a letter of opinion stating the validity and defensibility of our claims.

This should prove extremely valuable as we move forward in building the company. As other competitors attempt to move into our space, they will bump up against <the> our patents. This will pose tremendous licensing opportunities for GBUCS and 2Xchange. A very interesting point within the NEOM agreement is the "NON-EXCLUSIVE" nature of the license. Congratulations to all at NEOM, and thank you for paving the way for corporations like ours.

Sorry you're not feeling well. Take care of yourself. I had a lovely weekend, thank you. Edmond and I did dinner & dancing on Saturday night. We had a picnic @ Allen Parkway on yesterday afternoon. Followed by a Super Bowl party for two. This was a lot of fun. We ate junk food and drank cokes all night. By 3:30a.m. this morning we both had a stomach ache.

a variety of new initiatives that are much bigger in scope.? Basically, just bad timing.

Best of luck to you and your team in your efforts to bring some efficiency to this market.? If there still is opportunity at the beginning of next year, please contact me.? Maybe we will have better luck then.

Jeff and Greg:

Echoing Jason's message from last week, we enjoyed meeting you very much.? With this email I would like to follow up on comments you made regarding a possible investment that would allow FairAir to serve in a market-making role.

As detailed in the attached presentation, we propose that Enron invest $3.5 million for 17% of our company as the lead investor in a $6 million round.? These funds would let us deploy $2 million toward market-making and grow our business over 12 months to the point where we are generating $250k in monthly profits. (Our projections are detailed in the attached spreadsheet.)

FairAir is the industry's best hope for the creation of a true travel market down the road.? Now that our system is operational, we are poised for growth.? As we discussed, Northwest has verbally committed to expanding from seven trial markets to their full route system.? Additionally, in direct conversations with American and Continental, we received a strong indication that an investment from Enron would tip the balance in our favor.

I will call you the morning of Monday, March 26th to follow up on this email.

Mr. Bodily,

I was able to speak w/Greg this morning and I regret to inform you that he will not be able to join your class via video conference on April 3rd as we had previously hoped.

Greg will have to leave Houston for some of our overseas offices beginning April 2nd for approx. two weeks (London, Tokyo & Sydney). I do apologize for the short notice, but these things tend to happen quickly, and with little or no notice.

Please provide me with some possible future dates during the month of May and I will discuss them with Greg.

Greg, I understand from your assistant, Liz, that you will be able to join my colleague Venkat and I and our eStrategy class on April 3 10:00-11:25 Eastern Time (9:00-10:25 Central) by videoconference. That is wonderful news for us!

We have a T1 line in our classroom and we can connect using two-way video so that you can see the class members and they can see you. I know that we can also arrange to put your power point slides on one screen and your face on another, if we wish to. At some point we'll get your technical people and our technical people to work out the details on the connection. We would want to verify soon that our systems are compatible.

We can chat about how to use the 85 minutes we have. I was thinking that we ask the students to prepare the digital case, The Transformation of Enron 1986-2000, in which you appear in a few segments in living color, and you look great, I might add. Liz said she thought she could a copy of the CD from Sherri, Jeff Skilling's secretary, or, alternatively, I'll be happy to send you a CD. In addition to the case, I would like to give the students additional new material (accessible on the course web-site) about Enron's new ventures in the online and electronic network world. (We could use a little help from some of your people to get the best materials, I suspect).

In class, we could have a case discussion led by Venkat and I for (say) the first half of class, and followed by your presentation/talk for the last half of class. Or we can give you more or less of the time--let's talk about it. I was hoping that you could direct the focus of your talk toward topics such as the following: 1. The strategy for new ebusinesses at Enron. 2. Enron's strategic advantages and competitive positioning in the digital economy. 3. Examples of laws of network economics in the digital world 4. Implementation of Enron's digital strategy.

We need to prepare specific assignment questions for the students to prepare. Some of them could be taken from the introduction to the case, which we could supplement with additional questions from you or that we devise together.

This will be a great experience for our students and for Venkat and I as well. And we are flexible about how much time you want to take and also about your specific topic. So please give me a call (or email) and we can settle on a plan.

Thanks very much for your willingness to participate.

E.On fails in bid to expand water business

11/17/2000 Handelsblatt English Summary Copyright 2000 Handelsblatt. Source: World Reporter (Trade Mark) - FT McCarthy.

HB/svu DUSSELDORF. Expansion plans of German utility E.On AG suffered another setback Thursday with the failure of takeover negotiations with water utilities Azurix of the U.S. and France's Saur.

Hans-Dieter Harig, head of E.On Energie AG, confirmed to Handelsblatt that talks with Azurix had been called off, and that negotiations with Saur, France's third-largest water utility, had also ended unsuccessfully. These latest developments appear to bring to an end for the time being to plans by E.On chairman Ulrich Hartmann to take his group to the top of the industry rankings in its core energy segments electricity, gas, and water.

In August this year, E.On pulled out of advanced talks with France's water giant Suez Lyonnaise des Eaux, after the two companies failed to reach agreement on valuation.

The takeover of Azurix stumbled at the same hurdle, sector insiders said even though Azurix's parent, U.S. energy group Enron, has been trying to sell the unit for some time. In 1999, Azurix generated sales of around $618 million.

Talks with Saur were broken off at an early stage, people familiar with the matter said. E.On's official line is that "no negotiations are taking place with Saur." The French group generated sales of 2.3 billion euros on 1999.

The failure of the talks now puts E.On at a disadvantage vis-a-vis its closest German rival, RWE AG.

RWE chairman Dietmar Kuhnt this week proudly announced the completion of the takeover of Britain's Thames Water, which takes his Essen-based group to third position in the European water-utility rankings, behind France's Suez and Vivendi.

E.On, meanwhile, appears to have few options left that would allow it to grow quickly through acquisitions. Instead, it is now likely to pursue its goals in smaller steps.

The group's growth strategy has so far only been realized in electricity. Through its creation from the merger of Veba and Viag it moved up to fourth position in Europe, behind Electricite de France, Italy's Enel and RWE. The latter gained a slight lead on E.On through its merger with VEW AG.

In gas, E.On still has some ground to cover. Hartmann has been trying for month to buy a majority stake in Ruhrgas AG, Europe's largest gas trader. He has the support of Klaus Liesen, who chairs the supervisory boards of both E.On and Ruhrgas.

But Ruhrgas' complicated shareholding structure is likely to make any investment lengthy and expensive. Co-shareholders Thyssen-Krupp and Mannesmann/Vodafone as well as oil multinationals like BP, Shell or Exxon-Mobil are likely to sell their shares in Ruhrgas only at high premiums. Sector insiders said premiums of up to 30% were currently under discussion. Ruhrgas' current market value stands at more than 10 billion euros.

MEMORIES "My father coached me in Little League baseball, he was a member of the booster club. He was always very involved, and he would come to all the games in high school and college, no matter where we were playing. He was my toughest critic, but also my biggest supporter. My fondest memory was during my sophomore year in college. I went down and worked out at the Phillies complex in Florida before the Mount Union baseball team went down there for our spring trip. My father went down and spent the whole week with me. He loved baseball and to enjoy that atmosphere with him was very meaningful." -- Texans Coach Dom Capers on his relationship with his father

"My dad and I are very different people, and about the only thing we have in common is our love of sports. He calls me every week, and we talk for about an hour. Probably 80 percent to 90 percent of what we talk about is football. Anybody who overhears our conversations must think we're nuts. I'm looking forward to the Texans playing next year, so my dad and I can start going to a couple of Texans games a year at Reliant." -- Posted in the Texans message boards by Columbia

Williams' Energy Marketing and Trading Unit Acquires Equity Interest In HoustonStreet.com

03/07/2000 PR Newswire (Copyright (c) 2000, PR Newswire)

TULSA, Okla., March 7 /PRNewswire/ -- Williams Energy Marketing & Trading Co., a unit of Williams (NYSE: WMB), announced today that it is acquiring a minority stake in Houston Street Exchange, a Web-based energy trading exchange.

Financial terms of the transaction were not disclosed. Since the launch of HoustonStreet.com in July 1999, Houston Street Exchange has established itself as one of the industry's most dynamic business-to-business exchanges for wholesale power trading. HoustonStreet.com recently announced plans to launch new Web-based platforms for trading crude and refined products at the wholesale level.

"Emerging technologies continue to change the way the energy industry operates, and HoustonStreet.com is on the leading edge of the revolution. Internet-based trading has exploded, and we believe that this investment will allow us to play a significant role in the development of new markets and platforms," said Bill Hobbs, president of Williams Energy Marketing & Trading.

"The investment in HoustonStreet.com is just one piece of Williams' eBusiness strategy," added Nancy Gustine, director of eBusiness for Williams Energy Marketing & Trading. "By acquiring a stake in this innovator in the electronic-exchange industry, we can capitalize on our marketing strengths while helping them transform the trading industry."

"To have one of the leading energy companies in the country invest in our trading platform is a direct validation of our technology and our vision for the future of energy trading" said Frank Getman, president and CEO of Houston Street Exchange. "We look forward to Williams' market strength and support in creating the premier online energy trading platform across multiple commodities."

Williams' energy marketing and trading unit buys and sells all types of energy products nationwide including natural gas and gas liquids, crude oil and refined products and electricity. The unit also manages its customers' exposure to volatile energy prices using comprehensive risk management services and creates customized energy financing solutions for producers and end-users.

About Houston Street Exchange

Designed by traders for traders, Houston Street Exchange represents the first Web portal for the trading of wholesale energy products. HoustonStreet.com provides an online trading engine that allows traders to buy and sell their energy products faster, more efficiently and more easily than they do today. Houston Street Exchange is headquartered in Portsmouth, New Hampshire, with offices in Houston, Texas. Houston Street Exchange is a majority-owned subsidiary of BayCorp Holdings, Ltd. (Amex: MWH). For more information, visit Houston Street at www.houstonstreet.com.

About Williams

Williams, through its subsidiaries, connects businesses to energy and communications. The company delivers innovative, reliable products and services through its extensive networks of energy-distributing pipelines and high-speed fiber-optic cables, comprehensive energy services, including commodity trading and risk management, and business communications systems, international satellite and fiber-optic video services. Based in Tulsa, Okla., Williams operates about $25 billion in assets. Company information is available at www.williams.com.

File	whalley-l/notes_inbox/531.

4th Annual Interactive Energy 2001 - CALL FOR PARTICIPATION

Why You Should Participate:

Timing - Utility deregulation in Texas will take place January 1, 2002.? Interactive Energy 2001 will provide the core issues for discussion that will shape the year 2002 and beyond in respect to the challenges and solutions affecting energy companies striving to compete in the newly deregulated utility industry.

Location - Nestled in downtown Houston, the George R. Brown Convention Center is the ideal gathering spot for energy IT executives.? Enron, Reliant Energy, ExxonMobil, Shell, Chevron, Texaco and Dynegy, among other global energy companies, set their roots within a five-mile radius of this facility.

Schedule - The Interactive Energy conference management team has devised the agenda for delegates, who are currently re-thinking their e-business strategies and B2B exchanges, to explore the technologies that will continue to add value for the industry.? The exhibit floor hours are power-packed with technology demonstrations, luncheons and receptions offering multiple networking opportunities.

To submit an abstract or for exhibit and sponsorship opportunities, please visit our newly designed website at www.InteractiveEnergy.com or call me directly at 832-200-3718.

REMINDER

We have not yet received your feedback. Your input is very valuable and to be included in the participant's summary report, it must be received NO LATER THAN CLOSE OF BUSINESS on Wednesday, October 25. Without your feedback, the participant may not receive a summary report or be eligible to attend the program.

* IMMEDIATE ACTION REQUIRED - Do Not Delete * Executive Impact & Influence Program

Dear Lawrence Whalley,

As part of the Executive Impact and Influence Program, each participant is asked to gather input on the participant's own management styles and practices as experienced by their immediate manager, each direct report, and up to eight colleagues/peers.

You have been requested to provide feedback for a participant attending the next program. Your input (i.e., a Self assessment, if you are a participant in this program, Manager assessment, Direct Report assessment, or Colleague/Peer assessment) will be combined with the input of others and used by the program participant to develop an action plan to improve his/her management styles and practices. If you are providing feedback as a Manager of the participant, please note that your feedback will be identified in the summary report.

It is important that you complete this assessment NO LATER THAN CLOSE OF BUSINESS on Wednesday, October 25.

To begin the online administration process, you will need the following Internet address and Password(s). NOTE: If you are providing feedback for more than one person, each password and participant name is individually listed below.

Open your Internet browser e.g., Internet Explorer or Netscape Navigator, and please type or copy the URL address below into your Internet browser (please DO NOT go through Lotus Notes):

Request for a Recommendation

Sender	tabish.rizvi@capco.com
Recipients	['liz.m.taylor@enron.com', 'whalley@enron.com']
File	whalley-l/discussion_threads/702.

Greg,

I'm sure that Liz has already informed you that I've called a couple of times to speak with you. My reason for calling is that I am currently working on my applications for business school and as I'm sure you can appreciate, recommendations are a very important part - since you attended Stanford yourself. I remember speaking with you about graduate school a while back when I was in Houston, and the words "it's a crap shoot" still stick in my head. That's what you called the application process and I'll never forget the quote. As I plan to apply, I will most definitely see first-hand how true these words are.

In any event, I need three people with whom I have forged great relationships with in my professional and academic career(s) who would be able to write me a "first-class" recommendation. I feel that you are definitely one of these people. I still hope that Enron would open an extensive presence in New York; I would most rather be there. I really liked what I did; unfortunately it was just too far from home.

I would really appreciate it if you would accept my request to write a recommendation on my behalf. I realize that you are probably very busy. Although I'm sure you are willing to help me out in this regard, please advise when I should forward the recommendation form(s). Right now, I am exclusively applying to Harvard for the January deadline, since it is really where I would like to get my MBA. The form basically consists of 6-10 questions (some are optional) that asks how well you know me (the candidate), in what capacity you know/knew the candidate and what you think about me. Rather logical, right - after all it is a recommendation letter. An electronic copy is attached to this e-mail that can be printed for your reference. Thanks again, Greg. Looking forward to hearing from you. My contact information is attached below. Please feel free to call me anytime on the mobile phone - I mean this.
